

Scarlet Ibis` project report

The Scarlet Ibis group has received from BEX five binoculars in July 2007, and after this date I have been organizing two field researches to watch birds and catalogue the species from south region of Brazil. One of our first meetings was inside of the Atlantic rain forest bioma, it was of great value for our studies, because we could find several birds of great sonorous potential, endemic species and etc...All The children have used the new equipments and they became really excited to improve their activities and their observation each, instead of doing the regular identification now they know that have a hard lesson of conservation to pass to other children and also to the adults.

The second meeting had been developing in Barigui Park, just there they could enjoy and follow a really great group of ornithologist's researchers and they were able to learn how to band the birds, for one special reason, acquires knowledge about threatened species of birds and the study area that they can reach.

All regards,

Cila Rocha

